MACAO NOTES.

(From Our Own Correspondent.) Macao, April 5.

The members of the Gremio Militar entertained their friends at an informal and most enjoyable hop on Sanday evening last to meet the Commander and Officers of the Donna Amelia.

The telegraphic station in the Congo (Angola) district is now connected with the international trunk-line.

A long-needed ordinance has been Gazetted whereby only able-bodied adults over 18 years may be granted a rickshaw license. Conductors of vehicles who unduly exert themselves when conveying more than one fare are liable to a fine. Likewise no rickshaw may cross the sloping thoroughfares unless provided with an extra coolic.

The feast of Our Lady the Sovereign. Healer was observed with great devotion yesterday in the San Lourenço parish. At 9 a.m. the Bishop Dom Jolo officiated at a Solemn High Mass and the crowded precincts were lavishly adorned with pretty draperies, flowers and evergreen. At '5 p.m. the Rev. Fr. Gomes of San Antonio addressed a numerous congregation and an hour later His Lordship attended by Deacon and Subdeacon and preceded by the Ceremoniar Dean Bartholo bearing the pastoral staff, carried the Holy Host in pomp round the Rua de San Jose. The military band timed the progress of the train of surpliced Canons and Choristers who were followed by a guard of honour from the Infantry Corps, and a goodly muster of the faithful. H.E. The Governor was represented by Licut. Ruells, A.D.C. The prolonged drought is being sorely felt and many of the wells are dry.

THE DOUBLE RAINBOW. ...

A remarkable phenomenon was observed during a thunder shower in Finland in the summer of 1908 by V. J. Laine, who was making meteorological observations for the Finnish Scientific Society. The shower approached from the east, and the thunder, which had been heard at intervals during half an hour, ceased before any rain. fell at the place of observation. During approximately the same half hour the eastern horizon was completely spanned by a double rainbow, which likewise vanished before the rain came. Immediately after each peal of thunder the colours of both bows, and especially those of the secondary bow. became confused and indistinct, and the whole double rainbow appeared to vibrate rapidly. Laine explains this singular phenomenon, in accordance with the Airy Pernter theory of the rainbow, by assum ing that the concussion of the air which produced the sound of thunder also increased the diameter of the raindrops from less than 1-250 inch to between 1-50 and 1-25 inch. If this assumption is confirmed it will furnish a valuable contribution . the theory of thunderstorms, which is still incomplete. Scientific American.

In the most recent issue of the leading Marathi paper the Reservits to be found an article entitled Ajche konneilen udhyanche Prelement ("To-day's Council, to-morrow's Parliament"). In it the writer states hiere who mould public opinion, definitely that, whatever Lord Morley may sny, the Indian people will never be satisfied until they roceive Parliamentary institutions with plenary powers. At the same time if we consider the state of the great dependency we find unrest in the Punjab and the United Provinces, murders and murderous attempts in Bombay, the pox Britannica barely existing in Bengal. It to be the ideal tonic food remedy affords must therefore be rejuctantly admitted striking avidence of the high esteem in that the reforms which for two warrs which Sanatogen is held as a restorative that the reforms which for two years occupied the attention of the Secretary of State and his "advisors, and embodied everything that Western experience could that anarchy would automatically disap shadowed by that danger signal depression attribute this failure to Indian ingratitude, permanently restores that bucyancy and bocause Englishmen experienced in Eastern affairs will readily admit that, as a rule, the Indian is at least as capable of Sir Gilbert Parker, equally famous as a feleing and showing gratitude as a European. In the hope therefore of ascertaining" the true cause let us cursorily examine the ancient. Hindu theory of THE DUTIES OF THE KING. That theory is fully disclosed in the mehabharata, the most majestic work ever produced by the human intellect, a work, too, which is to-day as popular with Indians as when 40 centuries ago it was chanted to instruct the youth and beguile the tedium of Princes of Hastinapura. Unlike all systems of government known to the West, the Hindu system contains no popular element whatever. In it we find no Witanagemete in which the nobles may advise the monarch; still less has it any place for a cemitia centuriata, with its stormy masses of spearmen, to scrutinise and control the encroachments of the Royal prerogative. In the kingdoms described in the Mahabharata the inhabitants are rigidly divided into four wholly distinct and separate classes (Udhyog Parva p. 67, Roy's trans-lation). First come the Brahmans whose duty it is to study, to teach, to minister sacrifices - receiving in return gifts from "known" or, as we should say, respectable persons. Then follow the Kalattrings or the warrior class, whose whole life has to be spent in fighting and in warlike exercises. Thirdly come the Vauyes who acquire merit by accumulating wealth through commerce, cattle-breeding, and agriculture Fourthly, we have the Sudros, or serfs, who are bound to obey the other three classes, but who are forbidden to study their scriptures or partake in their sacrifices.

High over all classes is the King. is the living symbol of strength and power. r He is "the tiger among men," the "bull of the Bharata race," and his form and features bear the visible impress of the Most High. The whole arduous business of government rests on his shoulder. He cannot appeal to his sobjects to help him in carrying out good administration nor can he leave his duties to others. For to the laws of his order (Vana Parva, p. 457). At the utmost he can employ counsellors to advise him, but their numbers must never exceed eight (Canti Parva, p. 275). in any case they only tender advice when asked (Udhyog Parra, p. 100), and the full responsibility of all acts rests the King only. It is he who must keep the arsenals, the depots, the camps, stables for the cavalry, the lines for the elephants, and replenish the military storehouses with bows and arrows. It is ho who must maintain in efficient repair his six different kinds of citadels-his water citadels, his earth citadels, his hill citadels, his human citadeis, his forest citadeis, and his mud citadels (Canti Parva, p. 277). " It.

is he who must see that the capital has abundant provisions, impassable trenches impenetrable walls; that it teems with elephants, cavalry horses, and war-chariots. He must maintain an efficient staff the testimony of over 12,000 physicians as of spice to ascertain the strength of to the superlative merits of Sanatogen as. neighbouring monarchs and do his utmost | the ideal tonic food remedy. to cause dissension among their servants (Conti Parva, p. 224). posed on him as a religious duty. For having protected his Kingdom a King becomes sanctified and finally sports in Heaven (Canti Parva. p. 68). Whether he does not do any other religious acts, if only he protects his subjects he is thought to accomplish all religion." (wid., p. 193). THE PERALTIES OF SECUTION.

In return for the proper discharge of his innumerable tasks, he is regarded by his subjects as the incurrection of Indra. He is entitled to a sixth share of the gross revenue of the country. Fearful penalties attach to the infringement of his rights. "That man who even thinks of doing an injury to the King meets with grief here and Hell hereafter" (Canti Parso, p. 221). "He will be destroyed like a deer that has taken policed to the other hand, tions-and above all, if he does not protech his subjects he offends grievously. "These persons should be avoided like a leaky bost on the sea, a preceptor who does not speak, a priest who has not studied the Scriptures, a King who does not grant protection." (Canti Pavia, p. 176). "A King who does not protect his kingdom takes upon himself a quarter of its sins." (Lirona Parras p. 625). allegiance. It's powerfus king approaches kingdoms torn by anarchy from desire of annexing them to his domina the people should go forward and receive the invador with respect." In a similar manner the entire Civil administration must be bonducted by the King. He must see to it that wide roads, shope, and water conduits are constructed. He must look after the streets and by-paths. He must treat all classes, impartially, and, above all, scrutinise carefully the work of the Courts of Justica. The penal bode properly applied by the ruler maketh the warders [i.e., Judges] adhere to their respective duties, and leadeth to an acquisition by the ruler himself of virtue." (Udhyok Pores, p. 57). But although the subjects have the right to expect justice they cannot expect kindness or even easy condescension. The heart of a Bing is as hard as thunder." (Canti Parca, p. 57). "Knowledge makes a man proud, but the King makes him humble (Canti Parra, p. 223). When the King rules with a complete and strict reliance on the science of chastisements, the foremost" of ages called the Kirta is said to set in " (ibid., p. 228). "The King must be skilful in smiting" (ibid., p. "Fiorceness and ambition are the qualities of the King (bid., p. 50).

The King who is mild is regarded as the worst of his kind, like an elephant that is reft of fierceness" (bid.,

p. 171). Indeed, failure to treat subjects with rigour is visited with penalties as tremendous as failure to protect them. They forget their own position and most truly transcend it. They disclose secret counsels of their master; without the least anxiety they set at nought the King's commands. They with to sport with the King as with a bird on string" (ibid., p. 172), and in the and they destroy him. "The King should always be heedful of his subjects as also of his focs. If he becomes heedless they fall on him like vultures upon carrion" (Canti Pared, p-289). INFLUENCE OF THE MAHABHARATA. Here we have commended as a pattern of administration a despotism such as the West has never experienced. It is inquisitorial, severe sometimes, perhaps, wantonly cruel. But from the fearful pitfalls that encompass weakness it is certain to be sleeplessly vigilant and in the highest degree virile, forceful, and efficient. Now it will be asked what bearing the doctrines of a work four thousand years old have on the problems of the present day. But it must be remembered, as that eminent scholar, the late Mr Jackson, the victim of the abominable Nasik outrage, pointed out, that Hindu civilisation and

Hindu thought are at bottom the same now as in the days of Yudhisthira. The Mahabharata is the constant companion from youth to age of every educated Indian. Its tales have provided matter for the poetry, the drama, and the folksongs of of all ages and of all languages. No Hindu will live in a house facing south, as it is there that lives Yama, the god of death. No Hindu will go to sleep without murmur ing Takshaku as a preventive agninst snake bite. For Takshaka rescued the snakes from the vengeance of Janamajavas, the great-grandson of the Mahabharata hero Arjuna. The independent Indian Princes conduct their administration exactly or the lines indicated in the Mahabharate. and even States as enlightened as Baroda and Kolhapur still adhere to the Council of eight Ministers recommended in that immortal work. Indeed, its teachings really explain the puzzle of Indian loyalty to the British Government. According to Western ideas, no amount of par Britannica would compensate the conquered for foreign rule. The Poles still sigh for the bad | the 14th day of April, 1910, at 12 o'clock old days of independence and misrule, and are in no way comforted by scription of Banking and Exchange and Japanese make, One American Marble the efficiency of German administration. But the Indian's allegiance to his native kings, was as the Mahabharata lays down, released by their weakness, and he readily transferred his loyalty to those who, although foreign, had yet shown that they could govern vigorously. Eastly, Mr Roy, in the introduction to this translation entertained no doubts on the subject for he replied to the critics who charged him with unlocking to the barbarian the Sacred Scripture that he did so in the cause of good government. The immense size of the Indian Empire, 426 precludes anything like the centralisation | The properties consist ofbeen framed on a scale generous enough to $192. IN PRAISE OF WORK.

In the most readily accepted conclusions there is always an element of falsehood, and it would be possible to maintain the thesis that the greater the element A Blend of the Finest Pure of untruth the more generally is the conclusion accepted and acted upon. We will take as an example the statement so often made that the twentieth century has settled down to the belief that the pursuit of happiness is, and ought to be, the spur and aim of human existence. Here, of course, everything insight into the mysterious working depends on the meaning of the word happiness, and it is indeed a wide one. With some it means physical enjoyment and pleasure, either present or in anticipation, and leads to the accumulation of wealth at the expense perhaps of health, comfort and the present enjoyment of living. With others it may mean the laborious acquisition of knowledge with the view to future. may even only posthumous, fame These are the aristocrats of mankind-With the great majority of men, alas, played by request. All were given in Mr it means nothing more than the obtain. Fuller's customary good style. A vocal ing the means of continuing an existence already sufficiently miserable. To the poor and laborious classes the pursuit and R.E. White. of happiness can be no spur or guide. They have hope, of course, but it cannot be based on the success of each individual's own exertions. A Life of Jeaus Christ, in modern English. by the Rev. JAMES SMITH. London.

Macmillan and Co. This little book has been primarily compiled for the use of Indian students. M Smith has taken the Gospel story as told by the four evengelists and woven it into one consecutive story, thus avoiding all repetition and bringing out the chief events of Christ's Ministry in proper chronological order. To one brought up in the use of the Authorised Version the variations in some of the texts is perhaps a little disconcerting at times. The old, old story is wedded in English ears and minds to the noble endences and the marvellous grammatical conciseness of King James' translators, but the people to whom Mr Smith addresses his work will not feel any such shock as a new reading from the Greek or other unquestionable sources gives to old-fashioned folk of English birth. For Mr Smith has consulted many Harmonies and translations in order to the more satisfactorily carry out his ideals and on the whole he is justified of his selections. We should imagine that missionaries in China would find this little ctived promises of 200 oil paintings and work exceedingly useful.

At the present time we have a fine illustration of this in the "strained relations" (as one newspaper puts it) between Dumfries and Berwick-on-Tweed. For over a hundred and ten years, Dum-Own Scottish Borderers; by the fiat of the War Office, the head-quarters of the regiment has been removed to Berwick; hence a great storm in a little teacup. Dumfries | connected with the firm of Mesers Macueil is in arms, and all over the country natives of the." Queen of the South" are gathering Dumiries men to Berwick-on-Tweed, or Kamschatka if you like, but it is " A Loreburn ! ' that will everywhere be their was cry, and 'Bonnie Annie Laurie' will be the song that stirs their blood." I may remind you that . A Loreburn! was the Scottish Eight. old gathering-word of the Dumfries burghers, and that "Maxweltown brace" are close to the town, Several Scottish societies, too, though they may have no special connection with Dumfries, are takof the Tweed. We are rather enjoying the quarrel here: it is a relief to Imperial politics and eternal squabble over the Budget and the House of Lords:

The trade returns for February are catisfactory. The imports were valued at £51,158,557, an increase of £690,214, or 1.3 per cent.; the British exports at £10.184,560, an increase of £1,716,926, or 20 per cont. Under imports, wheat ingreased nearly 1,500,000 cwt., and £784,000 in value, but meat fell off £590,000, Sugar imports were £415,000 greater. In cotton there was a decline off no less than 1,752,000 cwt., or £2,969,000 in value. Imports of hides and skins rose £305,000, while in indisrubbor there is the enormous advance of £1,067,000, or upwards of 100 per cent. though in quantity we received only 52 per cent. more. Copper and tin imports grew 233,000 and £174,000 respectively. Turning to exports, there is an improvement of £3,275,000 in manufactures. Cotton gained £1,102,000, European demands being appreciably heavier than a year ago, while India and Canada took more. Woollen goods increased £740,000, iron-and ateal £377,000, and chemicals £348,000. bu machinery and ships declined £259,000 between them. Inc. ampoing return show smaller British sutrice and clearings for the two months, but the tonnage of foreign vessels has expanded slightly under both these heads.

Regarding our trade with the Far East in Hebruary, an extraordinarily small quantity of cotton yarn again went to China and Japan, making the fall in value in the two MANILA.... months alone over £40,000 in the case of China and £16,000 in that of Japan Purchases for the Straits Settlements have, however surpassed those of last year; decided drop in the case of China-viz. 22,000,000 yards or, in value, £166,000, showing a decrease of £20,000. On the other hand, there are increases of £25,000 in the case of the Straits Settlements, £2,00 in that of the Philippine Islands, and £3,500 that of Siam. The total decline in the China trade this year amounts now to some 0,000,000, yards. Linen exports to the Philippines continued their upward course. as also did the woollen and worsted tissues trade, with China and Japan. : A larger quantity of silk broad stuffs were, also shipped to the two latter countries. Smaller supplies of coal have so far this year been exported to the Straits. Japan's purchases of ship, bridge, and boiler plates were practically stationary. The trade with Japan in wrought tubes, pipes and fittings, steel bars, galvanised and corrugated, sheets, and tinned plates, and sheets showed an improvement in February, but there is a decline recorded in the case of pig iron and textile machinery. Shipments of tinned plates and abouts to China were also larger, but under toxtile machinery the same country shows a decrease. With regard to imports China tea sgain exhibits a shrinkage, amounting to 52,000 libs. from the Far East. Hemp from the Fullippines rose £40,000 in value, but is still a long way behind, taking the two menths into consideration. Large quantities of soys beans came from China and making the total decrease this year 459,000 Japan. Tin imports from the Straits continue to expand.

"At the age of three months I first mmenced to suffer from eccome which started on the forehead as a red patch. This gradually broke out in spots and in time spread all over my face. Various remedies were tried, but without success. but without success. I then commenced treating seconding to the doctor's orders, but not much good was done. After a few months of this, the disease began to spread all over my face and my parents tell me that at this stage my over were like looking into two holes, as the spots were so bad. Eventually the disease left my face only to break out in other parts of my body. They tried medicines, herbs and scape, and in fact any cines, herbs and scape, and in fact any-

"This trouble went on until I was eight years old.—At that age my par-ence decided to give the Cuticuma Rome-dies a trial. When they were first used, the condition I was in must have been extra bad, as they tell me they had to peel my shirt from my back, as it used to stick to the scree. My lers were a solid massed eccema from the inside to thecalf.

My stockings used to stick every day and they had to be pulled off along with the spots, I had to wear gloves to keep me from scratching the scree. The first night Cutieurs was used I slopt all night, which was a thing I had not done for which was a thing I had not done for some time. An improvement could be seen immediately and after using three sets of Cuticura Soap, Dintment and Resolvent I was practically cured. Cuticura Soap was continued for about twelve months when I was quite free and my skin clear again. This is twenty years ago now and I have never suffered since. George A. Gibson, 35, Newton, Dalton on Furness, Lance, Eng., Aug. 14, 1908."
